picture to himself the agony of this sad wife. A stranger, destitute of money, carrying in her arms a weakly child. not yet recovered from a severe illness, The late war has developed many romances, but none more singular and translated that her husband was dead. There was no doubt touching than the following, which we of his death; the registry kept at Camp Douglas showed it, and the grave was pointed out to her, which bore this in scription on a pine board :

MAJOR CHARLES GEROUX,

3D LOUISIANA CAVALRY. The same grave this day is neatly sod-ded over, and at its head is a rose bush. Broken hearted and bowed down with grief, she wended her way on foot to the great city of Chicago—not knowing why she went. A stranger among strangers, with no one to aid or pity her, save the good God, whom, in her inmost heart, she believed, had forsaken her.

She was taken in and cared for by the Sisters of Charity until she could hear from her friends in Ohio, from whom she had received no intelligence for the past four years. A letter was received, that immediately after the war her uncle had died, and that soon after his widow had removed to Iroquois county, Illinois, to live with her married son. Mrs. Geroux was supplied with money to enable her to find her friends in Iroquois county, where she has since resided.

Geroux returned to his situation at Cincinnati, and was sent by his firm to collect a debt due them in this county. While here he sought out the attorney who had him discharged on the habeas corpus, to learn the whereabouts of the horse that did him such good service, and to secure his assistance in collecting his debt. He soon made himself known, and while they were discussing the stolen horse, a lady and child entered the same office. There was a momentary pause, and husband and wife were in each other's arms. We shall not attempt to de-scribe the scene which followed. The husband found a wife and child, whom he firmly believed dead—and the wife found a husband, over whose grave she had shed bitter tears of woe. Mrs. Geroux was visiting the same at-torney, to find out about her husband's confiscated property, and to apply to the Government to have his property restored

Explanations followed, about how each supposed the other dead. They returned to Iroquois county, a few miles south of our county line, the same day, and have since removed to Cincinnati, which city he will make his permanent home.

The Next Veto to be Unavailing.
